

Ionix appoints new leadership team

UK, April 2022

Ionix has appointed new leadership positions effective from 01 April 2022 to support our next phase of growth. The Company's board of directors has appointed co-founder Tim Stevenson and Operations Director Steve Holding as joint Managing Directors.

Tim has over a decade of experience in industrial sensors for challenging environments and previously served as Development Director responsible for technology and product development since Ionix's incorporation. Focussing on the external facing activities of the business, Tim will retain responsibility for product development and lead the sales and marketing strategy.

Steve brings a wealth of production management experience and will retain responsibility for the internal operations and production activities to support our growth in both capacity and capability.

The new leadership, supported by Ionix chairman Ian Williamson, reflects the strategic importance of our increasing global customer interaction and our growth ambitions.

David Astles, outgoing CEO, continues as an executive advisor to support our continuing growth.

The executive Team with Tim and Steve consists of Nadim Borini, recently appointed into the new role of Sales Director, Tim Comyn (Technical Director) and Will Vickers (Product Director).
